

Safe and Profitable Investments

Well-defined and strict rules are laid down for "trust" investments, in order that the real owner may be protected from loss.

"No wealth is intrinsically ours. God owns it all—the silver and gold and cattle and all that is. There is no title or deed that is good for long. The Real Owner, for a little while only, puts us in charge of his things. He does it for the development of us and the best use of his things, and he keeps watch of his stewards in their use of his own."

Thousands of Christian men and women who hold their wealth in trust for God are eager to prove themselves wise stewards. What investments shall they make?

INVESTMENTS IN EDUCATION RECOMMENDED

A Parliamentary Commission of Great Britain, after spending nearly nineteen years in investigating more than 20,000 British charities, reported that of all objects of benevolence, higher education had proven wisest, best and most efficient of all; first, because the superior integrity and ability of the trustees who consent to administer such funds together with the intelligent appreciation of those aided by them, combine to furnish the best guarantee that they will be kept perpetually administered in the purpose and spirit of the founder whose name they bear; and second, because in improving higher education all other good causes are most effectually aided.

The Christian College Brings Quick Returns for the Money Invested

"There is no quicker way to get a young man or woman ready for life than the way the college offers. A liberal education of the classical sort will enable a man to do at thirty years of age what without it, he would not be able to do before forty, if then. It adds ten years to a man's productive power, and it adds these years at the beginning of his life rather than at the end. If you want to get your youth ready for a big life in the shortest time, give them a college."

The Christian College Yields Large Returns for the Money Invested

President Eliot said: "The college will make to the community rich return of learning, poetry and piety and that fine sense of civic duty which makes republics possible."

Bishop W. F. McDowell tells of an old farmer at the close of the Civil War who, bereft of his sons, sat down in a certain college chapel. He saw the students come in and had a vision of the long procession of students through the years. He said to himself: "These will go and others will come. The professors will go and others will take their places. My farm would just about endow a chair. I will go home and deed it to this college. Then, by the grace of God, I shall be here while the world stands."

It is doubtful whether any other farm in that State has produced so valuable a crop as has this one during the last fifty years.

The Christian College Offers the Greatest Safety for the Money Invested

Bishop R. E. Hendrix asks: "Who ever knew a college—an endowed college—to die after it had reached fifty? A half century of true college life, like a prepared old age in man, is the dawning of immortality, even while living they become immortal."

The Christian College Confers Immortality Upon the Money Invested

Dividends will be declared on investments in Christian education for countless ages to come in the form of highly trained Christian leaders, lawyers, doctors, educators, ministers, missionaries and statesmen. The plans and enterprises of men often die with them, but these Christian colleges will grow with time, receiving every year larger and larger gifts.

The Christian College Offers Special Attractions for Investments in the South

Last year more than $50,000,000 were given to educational institutions in the United States. Only an insignificant part of this came to Southern institutions.

Before his death President Harper, of the University of Chicago, said to President William Wilson, of Washington and Lee University: "I know of fifty wills in Chicago that contain legacies to the University, ranging in amount from $5,000 to $1,000,000." How are the business men and women of the South viewing this field of investment?

May the men and women of the South see the peril of hoarding money and experience the blessings, multiplying through the years, of giving to Christian Education.
